The man next door had a poor old car,
It didn't run right, and it wouldn't go far.
The tires were worn and wouldn't hold air,
They always went flat when he went anywhere.

The doors were off, the headlights jiggled,
The brakes were loose, the steering wheel wiggled.
The fenders were bent, the cushions torn,
The gas cap was gone, the paint all worn.

He took his mother out for a spin,
The poor car rattled like so much tin.
One night the man drove it far from town;
That was too much, and the car broke down.

The lights went out, and the tires rolled off,
Then the engine died with a husky cough,
And that was the end of the poor old car,
That never ran right and wouldn't go far.
